The major criteria for imposing an academic program moratorium include, but are not limited to:
- conducting a comprehensive program review,
- dealing with a temporary shortage of faculty or facilities, or
- dealing with student enrollment pressures beyond what the program can handle.

Program moratoriums must be reported to the Commissioner’s Office. According to Board of Regents’ Policy 303.4, an academic program moratorium becomes a withdrawal after a three-year period unless the Board of Regents approves continuation of the moratorium.

The major criteria for imposing an academic program withdrawal include, but are not limited to:
- program enrollment insufficient to sustain itself,
- inability to hire qualified faculty, or
- program need eliminated.

An academic program withdrawal requires approval of the Board of Regents. Subsequent reinstatement of a program also requires approval of the Board of Regents.

If an academic program has been withdrawn without approval of the Board of Regents, or an approved program is not implemented, the program remains in withdrawn status and approval of the Board of Regents is required to reinstate or implement the program.

According to the Office of the Commissioner of Higher Education, an institution must comply with the following procedures for program termination:

3. Meet with students to discuss program completion deadlines, course scheduling and options.
4. Notify all internal curriculum committees and Faculty Senate of impending program closure.
5. Notify Faculty Union (where applicable).
